

Andrew C. Diller

Trustee of InfoAge

Andrew Diller is a director of engineering architecture at Comcast Cable, LLC in Philadelphia PA. He has a long career at Comcast and has been leading teams of technologists for over ten years. Andrew has worked in the technology sector for over two and a half decades for startups, small consulting companies and large corporations. He has a proven track record in designing innovative solutions and technology platforms in the messaging space, having worked extensively in email and SMS messaging engines in private and public cloud spaces that have delivered billions of messages to customers. He was an early adopter of cloud technologies and acknowledges the expansion of cloud services as a foundational part of his success in this sector.

Andrew attended college at the University of Maryland, College Park where he received a Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy and Machine Intelligence. He has been working with technology and computers for most of his adult life. While at college he helped found numerous clubs and technology advocacy groups and worked on many projects to help bring technology into the classroom.

As part of his lifelong interest in computing machinery, Andrew discovered and became involved in the Vintage Computer Federation, a member organization headquartered at the InfoAge Learning Center. After serving for two years on VCF's steering committee which helped guide and manage the artifacts and exhibits for vintage computing in the InfoAge campus Andrew became involved with the InfoAge administration itself and continued his many trips from Philadelphia to Wall, NJ. He accepted a position as InfoAge organization Liason to the board and was accepted into the InfoAge board in 2020.

Andrew now helps with the many independent member organizations at InfoAge and works with the administration to manage and support their technology and web needs. He is also a member of the InfoAge IT committee which manages IT infrastructure on campus.

Andrew lives with his wife, Dr. Kathleen Diller, a Psychiatry Specialist at the Pennsylvania Hospital, University of Pennsylvania Health System. They live in and enjoy West Philadelphia with their two school-aged children. Andrew has too many computers at his home.
